OPPICE STATE BOARD OF IMMIGRATION, ? To the Editors of the Enquirer : Gentlemen—I respectfully request a place in your columns for the enclosed resolutions, passed by the General Assembly on the 5th instant, being, as I think, of much public concern. Very respectfully, WM. H. RICHARDSON,

[Joint Resolutions in Relation to the Polish Exiles. Agreed to January 5, 1867.]

Whareas, the settlement of the Polish exiles in Spotsylvania county, recently effected by Gen. Tochman, of Richmond, has been intended, and is universally considered an effective and suitable measure to encourage other European emigrants to come to Virginia; and whereas, these Polish pioneers of immigration to Virginia have no means to support themselves during the coming winter, but by reason of their former positions, associations, and still preserved influence amongst the agriculturists of their own class, in Poland and Germany, they constitute a most desirable element for Virginia's pioneer settlement:

constitute a most desirable element for Virginia's ploneer settlement:

It is, therefore, resolved by the General Assembly, That the attention of the citizens of this Commonwealth, and of its wealthy friends residing in other States, be and is hereby called and directed to the fact that the contributions solicited and offered for the support of these Policial ploneers of immigration to Virginia is virtually a contribution designed and intended to sustain our State policy of attracting the attention of European emicrants to Virginia, and inducing them to settle amonest us, which the hospitality and aid offered to these exiled Poles are but calculated to effect and secure to us.

IMMIGRATION.

The Board of Immigration presented a report of their operations since the organization of the Board, stating that despite the publication of an address to immigrants and the foreign correspondence opened, "their efforts have led to no practical result," owing to the competition from other States whose active and industrious efforts, including the appointment of Immigration Agents in Europe, which steps "have rendered such an appeal as ours almost useless." and demand more vigorous efforts which steps "have rendered such an appeal as ours almost useless," and demand more vigorous efforts for the future on our part, and for this purpose the Beard deem additional legislation necessary.

Accompanying this report was that of Gen. Wm. H. Richardson, Commissioner of Immigration, stating that the denations to the Beard had amounted to $100, and that a lean of $500 had been effected. In June last, a correspondence was opened effected. In June last, a correspondence was opened with the President of the American Emigrant and with the President of the American Emigrant and Homestead Company, of New York, but had led to no practical results. In September last a select colony of seven hundred Danes could have been settled in Virginia if farms of fifty and one hundred acres could have been procured on reasonable terms, but the negotiations for the purchase of said farms failed on account of the high prices demanded for lands. This colony brought with it $280,000 in gold. The remainder of the report is devoted to a discussion of the necessity of obtaining white labor, the countries best adapted to the supply of our needs, the inducements which must be held out to attract immigration, and other topics of interest connected with the subject.

Mr. Crump, while feeling the tenderest sympathy for the musical proclivities of the gentleman from Charlotte, and fully participating in his admiration for that glorious instrument—glorious alike whether in the hands of Paganini, in the concert-room, or Sambo in the kitchen—could not see why it should be exempt from taxation, as every man within sound of its strains would be willing to pay the small tax upon it.

The House had no music in its soul, and refused to exempt the violins.

Mr. Garnett proposed to exempt from taxation all musical instruments, save harps, melodeons, and piano fortes. Lost. The bill was read, and its further consideration postponed until to-morrow.
On motion of Mr. Lee, the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The address of the Texan Congressional delegation to the American people, sketches the formation of the Republic of Texas, and its incorporation into the Union; says that its subsequent secession was due to conflicting interpretations of the Constitution—one class affirming subsequent secession was due one conflicting interpretations of the Constitution—one class affirming that the General Government was the creation of the States which could withdraw from the Government when it was no longer acceptable: the other states and the states which could withdraw from the Government when it was no longer acceptable: the other states and the states and the states and the states are stated by striking on the states and the states are stated by striking on the constitution, and the point was made that the resolution should go to the Committee on Reconstruction, and the point was sustained and the resolution referred.

Mr. Kelso, of Mo., subsequently introduced the same resolutions, modified by striking on the states are stated by striking or stated by strik the States when it was no longer acceptable; the other declaring its formation the act of the people of the United States, from which no section could withdraw. It is claimed that the weaker party sought to withdraw from the Union, not to prevent the to withdraw from the Union, not to prevent and Northern States from retaining their government over themselves, with their own construction, but it can be preservation as to the Southern States as they understood it. In the warlike struggle which around the South was overcome, and the address gives history, the President's efforts at re-construction, and says that the laws of the United States are being executed within its limits without hindrance or resistance from the people or the State

The reasons for exclusion are to be gathered from the debates and measures proposed in Congress and the public discussions classwhere rather than specific legislative action.

The injustice of this course is apparent. It leaves the people of Texas in the dark as to what is really asked of them. The adoption of the proposed Constitutional amendment is pronounced by some to be sufficient to insure readmission, though this is controverted by many in leading positions.

The House bill dividing the western district of Arkansas into two judicial districts, was referred

To the intimation that Texas is disleyal, it is replied that that assumption establishes the precedent that a Congressional majority might charge the rebellious temper of the people of a State as a reason for perpetuating an injustice. As it is, the voice of Texas is not heard in her own defence; and again, no greater wrong can be done a community again, no greater wrong can be done a community that to judge its character by isolated expressions or acts.
